CONSTITUTION & RULES
OF THE
QUEBEC
MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

PREAMBLE.

At a meeting of the Mechanics of Quebec, held on the sixteenth of December, 1830, convened for the purpose of deliberating on the expediency of founding an Institution, which should have for its main object the improvement of the condition of the working classes,

It was determined, that as the end proposed is best attained by placing the means of intellectual acquirement within the reach of those desirous of benefiting thereby, and which is best effected by an union of efforts, the establishment of a Society in Quebec, to be termed the "Quebec Mechanics' Institute," should be attempted.

The chief objects to be pursued by the Society thus formed shall be, to cultivate the most useful branches of knowledge, and for that purpose to commence forthwith the formation of a Library, the major part of which shall consist of works of a purely scientific character: to make known, by means of honorary and lucrative rewards to be offered, such discoveries in nature and art as might otherwise remain concealed: by bringing together in one association men of different pursuits and various acquirements, to collect a mass of information, which may have the effect not only of enlarging the minds of the Members of the Institution and of rendering each more useful in his sphere of action, but may also tend to the advancement of the interests of society generally, and of this Province in particular: to establish, as soon as the means of the Association will permit, lectureships on the most interesting and valuable branches of scientific knowledge; and with that view, and as a necessary appendix to the Library, to collect all kinds of philosophical apparatus.

And it is agreed the Society with these views shall be denominated "The Quebec Mechanics' Institute," and the
